HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

By C. N. LURIE

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

"MAD" AND "ANGRY"

Few words are more frequently misused than "mad" and "angry." It must be confessed, however, that there is some excuse for the misuse of the words, since many psychologists hold that it is difficult to tell when the emotions of a person are aroused, just where anger ends and madness begins. But in grammar there is a sharp distinction between "angry" and "mad." The former means to be vexed or out of patience, while the latter indicates madness, insanity. A person who is insane is mad, but a person whose mind is vexed is not mad, but merely angry. There is a figurative use of the word "mad"—that is, a use in which the words are not to be taken literally, such as "mad with pain," "mad with terror," etc.

"I am mad at that fellow," says a man, "he cheated me in a stock deal." He should say "I am angry at that fellow," etc.

GLOOM DISAPPEARS FROM KAISER HOME

Associated Press
